Archaeologists working at the site of Omrit in northern Israel have uncovered a Roman house dating back around 1,900 years.

The intricate house was adorned with images of plants and animals, and probably belonged to a Roman official who was stationed in the area.

Bizarrely, the archaeologists also found a layer of penis-shaped amulets on top of the house, which were often worn to prevent misfortune.

Researchers from Carthage College in Wisconsin discovered the house in Israel, which they believe dates back to the late first or early second century AD.

Speaking at a conference in Toronto, Professor Daniel Schowalter, who led the excavation, said: 'The floor [of the house] was plastered and its walls were covered in frescoes.'

The intricate frescoes included images of trees, plants, birds, fish, and ducks.

The researchers are unsure who owned the house in ancient times.

But speaking to Live Science, Professor Schowalter said: 'One would guess that it might have been commissioned by a Roman official who was stationed in the area, but it could also be the home [of] a local elite who adopted some traditional Roman motifs in decoration.'

So far, the researchers have only excavated part of the house but plan to return to the site to learn more about the ancient ruins.

Professor Schowalter said that the excavated area 'was probably a courtyard, since the doorway we have opens into the 'house' proper. In other words, you could be locked out in that area.'

WHY ROMANS WORE PENIS AMULETS

Phalluses were common symbols in Roman culture, particularly in the form of the fascinum - a phallic charm.

Bronze wind chimes called tintinnabula that featured the phallus, were produced in Pompeii to ward off the evil eye and other malevolent influences.

Penises were also carved onto doorways in the city, while statues of Priapus - god of fertility, himself often shown with a massive member - guarded gardens.

It was not unusual for Roman boys to wear the bulla - a protective amulet that contained a phallic charm - until they formally came of age.

A sacred phallus was among the objects considered vital to the security of the Roman state which were in the keeping of the Vestal Virgins in Rome.

GADGET REVIEWS

▶ Affordable, robust and surprisingly responsive: Samsung's Galaxy A5

With the eagerly awaited Galaxy S8 having been pushed back, South Korea-based Samsung has plugged the gap with the Samsung Galaxy A5, a high-end device with a mid-range price tag.

▶ Is it really worth paying £280 for Nintendo's Switch? MailOnline's verdict

While the design is impressive and easy to use, the game line up is disappointing.

▶ Google's Daydream: The $79 headset that could bring VR to the masses

Google's $79 headset is superb in terms of hardware - but is currently let down by a lack of apps. However, it has absolutely huge potential to finally bring VR to the masses.

▶ Welcome Home: Google's $130 smart speaker

Google's smart Home speaker still has a lot of learning to do, and loses out to Amazon's Echo in some areas - but has incredible potential

▶ 'Not quite an iPhone replacement': Google's Pixel phone

Google's Pixel handset is good, and boasts an amazing camera and smart assistant. It's the king of the Android handsets - but still not great.

▶ Xbox One S review: Console that will make your 4K TV shine

Microsoft's Xbox One S has shrunk the giant console by 40%, and is stunningly designed console with 4K HDR capabilities - but comes with some caveats.

▶ The $1,000 wireless speaker that really IS worth the price: Naim Mu-so Qb review

Naim's incredible Mu-So Qb takes you back to the good old days - where the music captivates and enthralls, rather than simply being something in the background.

▶ The hi-tech $2,000 spin bike that really could change your life

Peloton's hi-tech bike lets you stream live and on demand rides to your home - and it's one of the best examples of fitness technology out there - at a price.

▶ Apple's new 9.7inch iPad Pro is a powerhouse you can take anywhere

Apple has added a few improvements to the smaller version, creating a tablet that is astonishingly powerful, but, unlike its big brother, is something you'll be able to carry everywhere.

▶ Speaker that looks as good as its sounds: B&W Zeppelin Wireless review

It's not cheap, but the $699 (£500) Zeppelin Wireless is perfect for the design conscious music fan.

▶ The iPad grows up: Apple's iPad Pro

The iPad Pro is, for many, a real laptop replacement - and a way to combine work and play in a gadget that will last all day and won't break your back to carry.

▶ 'A glimpse into the future of the living room': The new Apple TV

Apple says apps are the future of TV, and while its new $149 box does have some issues, its combination of streaming services, games and other apps make it the best way to make your TV smart.

The best all in one

▶ wireless speaker you'll ever hear: Naim Mu-so review

It might not be a name familiar to the US market, but Naim is a legendary British brand hoping to make a splash with the American launch of its $1499 Mu:So speaker.
