Dear Harold:

I am enclosing a carbon of the memorandum dated October 30, 1933. It will cover only a small fraction of the area you have since covered so thoroughly.

I found with this paper, penciled memoranda of a little talk made perhaps the same year or a year later, reading "If I can do so without raising your blood pressure unduly, I would like to repeat my annual warning that the present proposals are for something which will appear to clear-reasoning people to be selfish and bigoted -- something which is afraid to trust itself to propagation by reasoning."

Also, a query as to what dispositions of assets at the end of the copyright period. Still another, "We must take care lest the doctrine suffer by the apparent intolerances of those dedicated to its dissemination." Also "Provision for trials and expulsions repugnant."

Please preserve the enclosure for me.

Yours,

Clyde Bedell
